What's the Secret Stuff?

The argument over the President's tosetence on leiting the executive member of America's three borre team hold tor reins is being worn threadbare. Yet, it is a singular face that the most villafactor has never been revealed.

Mr. Roosevelt says the judiciary must be reorganized according to his plan in save the country from future perils. They must he future ones, because the new deal claims it has removed all present perlia.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace phrases it like this: "In my opinion, one depression like that of 1932 outweighs all the legalisms that have been put forth to prevent the people from trying to head off a repetition of that catastrophe." In other words, new dealers want to rescue the country from He rescuere.

They never have said how they intend to do it. Their plan, if it's so good that it warrants attacking the supreme court. should be the strongert argument in their tavor. They can't expect the country to believe in something it knows nothing about, yet they remain silent. The whole thing is like a magician asking the mun to the second row to lend him his watch, without telling him what is going to be done with it. The man in the second row, naturally, is hanging on to his timepiece. If he didn't, he wouldn't he the possessor of much Yankee shrewdness.

His situation is made unplessant, out not dangerouly so as yet, by the shricks of some other members of the sudience who seem to believe that a magician that can pull rabbits out of a hal as amouthly as Mr. Roosevelt has been doing for four years is above suspicion and beyond reprinach. Nevertheless, resulves the man in the second row to blinself, a little grimly by this time, I'm not going to hand over my watch to any magician until he tells me what he's going to do with it.

April Showers.

It seems a long time since the Ohlo valley flood. Even though it is conceivable April showers might enuse a recurrence of the disaster of last January, attention alleady has turned elsewhere, to strikes, to judicial reorganization and to the more pleasant subject of apring.

Announcement that a White House mes sage soon will revive the problem of flood control, a matter of vital interest two months ago, is a raminder of the complexities of the problem. One of them is the ease with which persons who do not live in flood areas forget the flood threat when the water recedes.

It takes a great disaster to stimulate inferest in flood control. So far, no one has discovered how to revive interest when it begins to lag, or how to keep it from lagging. The situation is like that of the farmer who couldn't repair the roof when it was raining, and when it wasn't raining never thought about it.

The President's proposal, whatever it may be, will be given careful consideration, of course. There is only one legitimate objective of flood control - the control of floods. It seems a good idea to make that clear in advance, lest the opportunity to spend public money be used for purposes which have nothing directly to do with flood control, such as advancement of Mr. Roosevell's hydro-electric program.

Once upon a time, changing license plates tered, fingers were bruised, ciothes torn and everybody was late for dinner. Those nesky little bolts which always rust became formidable iron monsters once a year, defying pliers, serew drivers, chisels and a higher supreme court. Its financial policies are being blocked by the law of averages and a natural court order. As the decree of mature cannot be americally or packed, an alteration and reversal of policy has been started. The period of transition has now begun.

That is the stort, behind the queer manifestations of the government bond market and the President's new announcement of policy on prices and eperaling.

It means: The old government belief by recovery, a firm hand must be laid on the hudget, the debt cannot be further materially increased, extra-budgetary outleys for housing, farm recancy, PWA, CCC, the must be avoided entirely or kept down to a small experimental basis, old-fashioned arithmethe is again likely to become necessary, if not popular. The Eccles-Morgania in the need for synthetic governments achool of thought has triumpited.

Banks are taking some of their money out of governments and putting it into commercial loans. They will continue to do so as long as business continues to improve and good commercial loans can be made.

This situation, however is largely technical. The field for commercial loans (good once) is still limited and consequently the amount the ited and consequently the amount ited and consequently the amount of government hunds which will be sold for this cause is likewise limited. Also the matter of tax costs involved in transferring from governments will be a brake.
